

"I am honored that they chose us to be in the pilot program. It was very enlightening, informative. We were excited, we were literally excited about it. I was like, okay guys, it's time to go next door [where trainings were held], come on, let's get it together and we were excited to be a part of it. So, I wouldn't change it."

"The parents were really overwhelmed with joy receiving those boxes... Because we service in an underserved community, it gives you such a sense of pride knowing that these families are appreciating that when some may be lacking food security, unfortunately."

"The things we learned with Lurie, I was able to actually communicate that with the parents [talking about a child whose father was killed] And when I explained to [mom] about the trauma and [other] things we learned, and we talked about the DNA and this baby is connected and he's still connected.

He's missing his dad. "
